ARCHITECTS SELECT SITE OF DORMITORY

R. E. MAJORS AND RUDOLPH MEYER CONFER WITH COMMITTEE

TO BE EAST OF DRIVE

Near Seventh Street Entrance—A Golf Course Practical, Says Majors

R. E. Majors, of the department of horticulture of the University of Missouri, who is also landscape architect for the State Teachers College here, was in Maryville yesterday conferring with President Uel W. Lamkin, W. A. Blagg, president of the Board of Regents, J. R. Brink, superintendent of construction, and Rudolph Meyer, architect for the new girls' dormitory.

Mr. Majors and the architect looked over the campus and recommended that the dormitory be located east of the drive, near the Seventh street entrance to the campus. It was not decided whether the site should be located north or south of Seventh street.

The landscape architect also inspected the work done on the part of the campus selected by President Ira Richardson for a new athletic field. The athletic field will be changed from its present location, but will probably not be placed where the grading has been done.

The architect for the new dormitory will prepare tentative plans for the building, which will be submitted to the executive committee some time next week. President Lamkin, Mr. Blagg and Mr. Brink visited dormitories last week at Columbia and St. Charles and they will assit the architect in planning a building of the very latest type.

The architect also inspected the old Seminary Building and will submit plans for converting it into a boy's dormitory. The old building has not been used for years.

While making their tour over the campus, the subject of a golf course was suggested: Professor Majors, declared that it would be easily feasible to construct a links on the campus and recommended that it utilize both the main campus and the Seminary campus, with the two blocks intervening.

Both Mr. Majors and Mr. Meyer returned to their homes yesterday afternoon.

WHITE STARS AND WILCOX TO CLOSE SEASEN HERE

Teams Will Settle Question Of Supremacy At the Fair Grounds Sunday

The last baseball game of the 1921 season will be played at the Fairgrounds Sunday, when the Maryvill White Stars will play a return game with Wilcox.

Two weeks ago the White Stars were defeated by one run after an umpire's decision which many claimed was responsible for two Wilcox runs. The question of superiority will be settled here Sunday.

All through the season the White Stars have been staging thrilling contests decided by one run. The majority of them they have won.

For the game Sunday, the White Star line-up will be strengthened by the addition of several new players. Henry Buhler will do mound duty, and Homer Black will receive his delivery. M. Still may also be used in the box if his hand is in shape. Tilson will play first base, Verlin Conley second, Floyd Conley third, and Scott shortstop. The outfield will be composed of C. Still, Moon and Hise.

ONE-CENT RAIL RATE IS FOR LEGION MEN ONLY

Extension Granted by Roads Allows War Veterans to Use Tickets November 1.

An extension of one day has been granted by railroads to legionnaires living within a 200-mile radius of Kansas City in which to take advantage of 1-cent railroad fare.

Certificates of war veterans and their dependents living within that radius will be honored by all railroads running into Kansas City until November 1, instead of October 31, as was provided in the original order.

The extension will affect hundreds of visitors to the conventions, Ingram H. Hook, chairman of the transportation committee, said Thursday. It will bring many legionnaires for the second and last days of the convention who otherwise would be unable to attend.

The 1-cent fare applies only to legionnaires and their dependents—not to the public generally, as was announced Wednesday.

PACIFIC ISLANDS TO CAUSE TROUBLE

WILL BE BONE OF CONTENTION AT ARMAMENT CONFERENCE

THE ORIENT UNSETTLED

Nine Nations Involved

Washington, Oct. 28—Nine nations will send delegates to the international parliament of diplomats which will convene here November 11. These nations are the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, China, the Netherlands, Belgium and Portugal. Each of these has holdings in the Pacific or operates a "sphere of influence" in China.

(By International News Service.)

Washington, Oct. 28—The problem of the Pacific, it is universally hoped, will find its solution at the Round Table of the Nations, about which will be gathered statesmen from nine nations, seven of which have possessions in the Pacific seas.

Before entering into a commentary upon the probable solution it may be well to determine first what the problem is. Due to the complexities entering into a consideration of what constitutes the problem it would appear that the Disarmament Conference has before it a task of portentous scope in the efforts it will be incumbent upon it to make to determine the exact nature of the problem they will have met to solve.

Two titanic agencies are at work in the Orient, and until such time as they become relatively quiescent, political boundaries throughout the Alsatic Continent and the Island of the Pacific will be "subject to change without notice."

Japan and Russia

One of these agencies is the disruptive force in peasant Russia, now felt not only in Siberia, in Russia Turkestan and in the Transcaucasus, but also in Persia. The other, is Japan, whose dominating desire, based on the necessity for territorial expansion, has resulted in a penetration of China and Eastern Siberia and the islands of the Pacific north of the Equator.

The estimated area of the Pacific Ocean is 67,810,000 square miles and is studded with islands the majority of which are in such proximity that they form groups or archipelagoes. Each archipelago belongs to some foreign power. But within the rough outline of almost all these archipelagoes there are certain islands which do not belong to the nation controlling the archipelago of which the "foreign member" is, geographically speaking a part. These foreign members of archipelagoes naturally, therefore, have become "sore spots." The Island of Yap is one of these. Samoa is another. It so happens that often these very "foreign members" are the most important of the entire group—commercially and from a naval and military standpoint.

Archipelagic Treasures

Just what are these archipelagic treasures?

There are the Continental Islands Australia, New Zealand, Japan, the Malay Archipelago, the Philippine Archipelago and New Caledonia. Borneo might possibly be placed in this class.

On Friday night, last, October 21, her divorced husband, Russell Lent, was arrested and placed in jail. On Saturday, October 22 Prosecuting Attorney Bissett filed information against Lent, charging him with the murder of his wife, Katie Lent.

He was arraigned before Justice Cummins on Saturday, who set his preliminary for Tuesday next, November 1, placing him under a $10,000 bond and committing him to jail.

The trial of Raymond Wren, charged with the murder of Ross Hammond, is set for Monday, October 31, at Clarinda, and is expected to finish this term of court under Judge Woodruff, who is scheduled to begin court next week in Sidney. Wren has been in the Page county jail ever since the time he was brought by the sheriff from St. Joseph.

The case will be hard fought, Wren's attorneys being expected to contest every inch of the ground, in seeking to prove that the shooting constitutes a case of manslaughter rather than murder. It is possible that an additional jury panel may be drawn for this case. —Clarinda Herald.

REESE ARSON CASE NOT YET DECIDED

WILL BE GIVEN TO JURY LATE THIS AFTERNOON.

FREE ON OTHER CHARGE

Jury Says Not Guilty in Peace Disturbance Case—Evidence Today All Circumstantial.

After hearing testimony in the case of state vs. Willis Reese, charged with arson in the third degree, a recess was taken in circuit court this afternoon to allow time for the preparation of the judge's instructions to the jury. The attorneys will finish their arguments this afternoon and the case will be placed in the hands of the jury.

The evidence introduced by the state was entirely circumstantial, tending to show ill feeling between Reese and the nephew whose house he is charged with burning. No witness testified that he saw the defendant set fire to the house.

James Gales of Skidmore testified that after the fire in which the house was completely destroyed with most of its contents, he discovered coal oil on one of the matresses taken from the house.

The main witness for the defense was Mrs. Reese, who told of her husband's movements all during the morning of the fire, declaring that he was about the house all the time. The home of Willis Reese is about two hundred yards from that of his nephew.

The elder Reese was indicted by the grand jury after the burning of the James W. Reese home, three and half miles south of Skidmore, on September 28. He was arrested on October 10 and entered a plea of not guilty.

The house which burned was part of the estate of Mrs. Charlotte Reese over which much complex litigation is still pending in courts. It was located on the fifty acres east of the road, and was occupied by James W. Reese, the nephew, while the "old home place," located on the main body of the land, west of the road, is occupied by Willis Reese. The fire occurred while the family was in Maryville. It was said to have started on the inside of the house and was not discovered until it had gained strong headway. Only a few pieces of furniture were saved. It is understood there was no insurance on the house and only about $400 on the furniture.

There has been ill feeling among the Reese heirs since the death of Mrs. Charlotte Reese, whose will practically disinherited three sons and a daughter and left the bulk of the estate to Willis Reese.

On the witness stand this morning the nephew, James W. Reese, testified that the defendant had said to him in the presence of others, "I'll get you out of that house if I have to burn you out."

R. J. Reese, a brother of the defendant and uncle of James W. Reese told of a dispute over the will, in which after he had threatened to break the will, Willis Reese said, "By God, if that will is broke, I'll burn every d—n thing on this place, before they get it."

The provisions of the will made by Mrs. Charlotte Reese and filed in Probate Court, November 4, 1920, made the following bequests: $25 to three sons, Charley, Wilbert and Rheugene; $100, her clothing and bed clothes to a daughter, Leona Reese Russnogle; $10 each to Lottie, Elmer and Lansing Reese, heirs of Mrs. Reese's dead son, Lansing Reese; and to another son, Willis Reese, all the remainder of the estate, both land and personal.

On the charge of peace disturbance, tried yesterday with his nephew, James W. Reese, as the prosecuting witness, Willis Reese was acquitted by the jury, which was out some time. The jurors were: Harry Lett, R. B. Jex., Jr., J. P. Merrigan, C. M. Warner, W. W. Alexander, O O Gregory, Ben Tarpley, John Morehouse, George W. Alexander, Elias Echterling, J. N. Alexander and Elihu Busby.

EVOLUTION FAILS ON FOUR POINTS

EVANGELIST PICKS FLAWS IN SCIENTIFIC THEORY.

TO CONTINUE TONIGHT

Origin of Matter, Force and Life are Stumbling Blocks, Says Dr. D. C. Kellems.

A great crowd was present at the First Christian Church last night to hear the first installment of Dr. D. C. Kellems' discussion on "The Missing Link". Time did not permit the finishing on the discussion last night and it will be continued tonight.

Extracts from the sermon last night are as follows:

"It has been reported and often times stated that ninety per cent of the scholars are Darwinian evolutionists. That statement in itself is a gross misrepresentation and exaggeration of the facts. But granting that these figures are true we must remember that fifty-three per cent of them are rank infidels and make no claim to religious professions of any kind, while the balance, without exception, are destructive critics and deny the inspiration of parts of the Biblical Record.

No Fight With Science

"I want it thoroughly understood that I have no fight to make with Science. I believe in Science but refuse to accept all the theories under the imposing name of Science. There cannot be a conflict between true Science and the Bible because God is the author of both. False theories of Science conflict with the Bible on every hand and false interpretations of the Bible conflict with true Science.

"No man can believe in the Bible and Darwinian Evolution at the same time. In order to substantiate his theory of Darwinian Evolution it necessarily follows that he must scrap the Bible and that is the work of the destructive critic which is the theological branch of Darwinianism. I am here to defend the Bible and I am not willing to permit anybody to take out those portions of the Biblical Record which refer to the Creation and which Jesus, our Lord, and His Holy Apostles endorsed without my bitterest protest.

"We have in the second chapter of Genesis and seventh verse, the record of the Creation of Man. "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of me; and man became a living soul."

Creation of Woman

"But here the Evolutionist dodges the issue by saying that the process of Creation is not given, but I ask how can we account for the Creation of Woman, and by the way, the Evolutionist has never given a solution to this question. The following verses of the same chapter give in detail the creation of Woman." And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam and he slept: and he took one of his ribs and closed up the flesh instead thereof: And the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made he woman, and brought her unto the man. And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man. Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh."

RAILROAD STRIKE CALLED OFF TODAY

CODE MESSAGE ORDER MEN NOT TO QUIT JOBS

COULD NOT DEFY U. S.

Sovereign Power of Government Stood Behind Move to Prevent Traffic Tie-up

Chicago, Oct. 28.—Code messages directing that the threatened railroad strike, which was set for Sunday, be called off were sent today to the general chairman of the big four brotherhoods and the switchmen's union of America by the grand chiefs of these oranizations.

Peace came, the union leaders admitted today, because the sovereign power of the government stood back of the move to prevent the strike.

"We could not defy the authority of the United States" said L. E. Sheppard chief of the conductors. "We thought we were hitting at the railroads but found our attack was directed against the Government."

"We called this strike to gain certain right to which our men were entitled," Sheppard said.

"It soon became evident, however, that the roads were succeeding in their misleading propaganda to the effect that we really would be striking against the government.

"This railroad propaganda found its way to the United States railroad labor board. This governmental agency told us that it would look on a strike as against it and the government and not against the roads, and that the full force of the government would be brought to bear aginst us if we walked out. Under such circumstances there was nothing to do but annul our orders for the October 30 walkout."

Chicago, Oct. 28.—The rail strike, scheduled for October 30, was averted last night when leaders of the switchmen, trainmen, conductors, engineers and firemen at a joint meeting adopted resolutions withdrawing authorization of a walkout and officials of the railroad telegraphers' organization announced they would take similar action. These were the only unions which had authorized a strike.

The vote calling off the strike was unanimous by organizations, W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen announced. The official wording of the resolution adopted was that the "strike be declared not effective."

The vote in the individual unions was unusually close, however, the firemen, particularly, holding lengthy arguments before agreeing to cancellation of the strike order, the labor chieftain said. In some of the groups the ballot was described as "the closest in history on a similar question". All of the differences were ironed out by the different unions, however, and the final showdown found all of them casting their ballots for "no strike."

NODAWAY COUNTY BOYS EXHIBIT CLASSY CALVES

Swift and Co. Buys Baby Beeves From Them For Highest Class Of Trade

At the recent Baby Beef Show at the St. Joseph Stockyards, some of the best calves were exhibited by Clayton Harkenrider of Ravenwood and Joseph New and Loren Heard of Skidmore, who are members of the Boys' and Girls' Calf Clubs of Northwest Missouri. Their baby beeves were purchased by Swift and Company and dressed well enough to be shipped to the company's branch at Albany, N. Y., where only the highest class of fresh yearling beeves are consigned.

This depot caters to the bon ton trade and a communication received from T. M. Willison, manager of the Albany branch, compliments the quality of the baby beeves, and writes the consignment was very suitable for his best trade. Mr. Willison congratulates the juvenile stockmen on their ability to finish their calves so well, and adds they should be encouraged to raise fancy sheep and hogs as well.

Missouri's Bonus Bill

Proposed Law Provides That Only Soldiers Who Lived in State One Year Prior to Declaration of War May Receive Compensation; Army Nurses Included.

If you were soldier, sailor, marine or nurse in the forces of the United States during the world war, and if you lived in Missouri one year immediately before enlisting, the state of Missouri will pay you a bonus.

At least that is the gist of a law the legislature is expected to pass in a special session, beginning November 3. Passage of the act was made mandatory by a vote of the people of the state.

The bonus is to be $10 a month for each month of service, but is not to exceed $250 for any one person.

Copies of the proposed bonus law have been sent out from Jefferson City. It was drawn by State Senator Gray of Joplin, and has been referred to members of the legislature for study before they go to the capital for the special session.

Must Raise $15,000,000

The bill also provides for the issuance of $15,000,000 of state bonds to pay the bonus and creates a commission to administer the distribution of the money.

The bill is very specific in indicating those to whom the bonus will be paid. It says:

"Each person, hereinafter called the 'soldier,' who was a bona fide resident of the state of Missouri at least during the 12 months just prior to the 6th day of April, 1917, and who served honorably in the military or naval forces of the United States, including army nurses, at any time between the 6th day of April, 1917, and the 11th day of November, 1918, shall be entitled to receive from the state of Missouri, out of funds created by this act, as a bonus, the sum of $10 per month for each month or major fraction of a month that such soldier was in active service: Provided that no one person entitled to a bonus under the provisions of this act shall receive a sum in excess of $250: Provided further, that no person shall be entitled to or receive any bonus herein provided, who, being in such military or naval service, between the said 6th day of April, 1917, and said 11th day of November, 1918, refused on conscientious, political or other grounds to subject himself to military discipline or render unqualified service, or who shall have been at any time guilty of any fraud or willful violation or evasion of the 'selective service act' or of the rules and regulations of the war department in force thereunder; and provided further, that no person shall receive a bonus who has been paid a state bonus from any other state in the union for the same service.

"The word 'soldier' as used in this act shall be construed to mean and include any officer, soldier, sailor, marine, nurse or other person who was regularly commissioned, enlisted or inducted into the military or naval service of the United States, and who served in the military or naval forces of the United States in the war with Germany and her allies: Provided, that the word 'soldier' shall not be construed as students in school or college training corps, who, in addition to military training, received some general educational instruction, unless such person shall have also had service of other character in the military or naval service of the United States, and then the time so spent as students in such school or college training corps shall not be counted in computing service under this act: Provided further, that the word 'soldier' shall not be construed to mean persons, who, not being otherwise duly commissioned, enlisted or inducted in the military or naval service of the United States, served only as students in student officers' training camps, but the time so served as students in students officers' training camps shall be included in computing the service of persons who served therein and who performed other service in the military or naval service in the United States: Provided further, that persons who were regularly commissioned, enlisted or inducted into the military or naval service of the United States, and who served all or a part of their services in the United States guards shall be deemed soldiers within the meaning of this act: Provided further, that persons who were regularly commissioned or enlisted in the regular army, navy or marine corps of the United States prior to April 6, 1917, and were serving under such commission or enlistment at that date and who, at the commencement of such commission or enlistment, were residents of the state of Missouri and had not established a legal residence in another state, shall, for the purpose of this act, be deemed to be a resident of the state of Missouri from the date of such commission or enlistment to April 6, 1917; and be it further provided, that the word 'soldier' shall not be deemed to include welfare workers or persons engaged in the work of the Red Cross, Young Men's Christian association, Young Women's Christian association, Jewis Welfare, Knights of Columbus, Welfare board, War Camp Community service, Salvation army, or like organizations."

Heirs May Get Bonus

In case of death of any person, to whom a bonus is due, his heirs shall receive it.

The bill provides that the bonus shall not be subject to claims of creditors and cannot be assigned.

The bonus commission is to include the adjutant general of the state's national guard and two civilians to be named by the governor. They are to receive $10 a day for their work and may employ assistants.

Because the legislature cannot provide interest money in time there will be no interest paid on the bonds until at the end of the first year. After that the interest will be paid every six months. The bonds are not to bear more than 5 per cent interest. The bonds will be tax exempt in Missouri.

DAKOTANS VOTE ON GOVERNOR'S RECALL

FIRST TIME ANY STATE HAS EMPLOYED METHOD.

N.P.L. FIGHTS FOR LIFE

Non-Partisan Leaguers Attempting to Keep Alive Principles It Advocates by Retaining Head.

Bismarck, N. D., Oct. 28.—North Dakota's 225,000 voters are balloting today on whether to recall Governor Lynn J. Frazier and the chief members of his administration. It is the first time a state has employed the recall against a governor.

The recall of Governor Frazier would be a bitter blow to the Nonpartisan League and the principles it advocates.

The members of the organization opposed to the administration call themselves the "independents." Strangely enough, they fought the forces which put the recall, initiative and referendum into the Constitution. Now they are employing the law in the hope of turning out of office Governor Frazier, who is serving his third two-year term; William Lemke, attorney-General, and John N. Hagan, Commissioner of Agriculture and Labor.

This trio is called the "big three."

They comprise the Industrial Commission charged with the management of the state-owned, state-operated industries which the Non-Partisan League champions.

State Operation Fails.

The "independents" hold that state operation of industries has proved to be a dismal failure and that conditions warrant an immediate change in the situation. Their candidates are:

For Governor—R. A. Nestor.

For Attorney-General — Sveinjorn Johnson.

For Commissioner of Agriculture and Labor—Joseph A. Kitchen.

The independents are a combination of Democrats and Republicans who fought the Non-partisan League at the last election, when the Non-partisans seized the election machinery of the Republican party and put over another victory. The independents also want to initiate constitutional amendments and laws so as to put into effect the platform of their organization.

It is charged by the independents that the group of Non-partisan League leaders have used the league to build up a great political machine, diverted public funds from the Bank of North Dakota into league-controlled banks to be loaned to corporations controlled by league leaders. It is also alleged that the Non-partisan League has driven money from the state by repeated attacks on financial interests and that it wasted great sums of money in enlarged payrolls and benefits for political favorites.

No Fair Trial.

To these charges the Non-partisan leaguers reply that their industrial program has not been given a fair trial. They say their program is essentially sound and deserves a fair test at the hands of the voters. Emphatic denial is made that the officials of the league are corrupt or inefficient. In the way of accomplishment the league officials point to the grain grading laws and claim that the Bank of North Dakota, by competing with private bankers, has lowered the interest rates and itself has made large profits. The financial interests of the state, league officials assert, have blocked their program at every turn.

Back of the unique fight is the picturesque personality of Arthur C. Townley, whose meteoric political career aroused interest all over the country. Townley drew together into one organization the farmers and industrial workers of North Dakota and swept his candidates into office in 1916 with overwhelming majorities. The league was again successful in 1918, and last November Governor Frazier was elected for the third term.

Big Program Outlined.

Townley's program, which has not attained its fullness, due to some extent, it is said, to the recent economic depression, called for state owned, state operated flour mills and elevators, packing plants; for a new state hail insurance law, state insurance on public buildings and state bonding department to bond all public officials. He also proposed to market North Dakota wheat in North Dakota terminal elevators, make flour in North Dakota and remove North Dakota wheat from the great grain market and mills in Minneapolis.

From the outset the league's program was assailed bitterly as "State socialism."

The recall election today results from the filing of more than 74,000 petitions. It was necessary that 30 per cent of the voters sign petitions to obtain a recall. Approximately 33 per cent signed.

Uel W. Lamkin at Gallatin.

Uel W. Lamkin, president of the Northwest Missouri State Teachers College and one of the foremost educators of the nation, paid a visit to Gallatin high school Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Lamkin plans to build up the Maryville college to rank as one of the best in the state, and reckoning from his past record, it is quite certain that he has the ability to carry out the plan. He spoke highly of the work of the local schools and urged the young folks to stay with the cause and gain an education.—Gallatin Democrat.

VETERINARIAN WILL TEST COWS FOR TUBERCULOSIS

New State Law Requires Tests For All Herds of Five or More From Which Milk Is Sold

Dr. T. J. Eagle of the United States Bureau of animal industry is in Maryville today and will remain in Nodaway County for some time to make tuberculin tests of cattle. He is sent out by the Missouri State veterinarian.

Under a new state law, effective January 1, tuberculin tests are required of all herds of five or more cattle from which milk or milk products are sold. The tests are free, and Dr. Eagle is here to make them.

At Clarinda last week an interesting result of such tests was shown. The veterinarian was showing to interested persons the lung and liver from a six year old Holstein cow which reacted to the test, out of a herd of six cows kept on pasture in the country. The owner asked him to kill the cow, that the fact of tuberculosis might be established by a post-mortem examination. The result was a demonstration which was educational to all who saw it. The liver and lungs were literally filled with tubercular nodules, likewise the milk glands, showing what danger such a cow is to persons drinking milk, and also to the hogs on the farm which consume the surplus milk. The cow before testing was apparently perfect, and had been gaining flesh rapidly under full feed, as the farmer was fattening her for the market.

Markets Stock by Truck.

S. T. Van Ausdall of Burlington Junction was at St. Joseph yesterday with a truck load of 230 lb hogs. Mr. Van Ausdall is making regular trips two or three times a week to the St. Joseph yards with stock by the overland route. The distance by road is approximately fifty miles. The trip usually requires about three hours each way.

Return To Bethany

C. M. Johnson and family have moved back to Bethany from Maryville, where they went a few weeks ago to be centrally located in Mr. Johnson's territory while he was on the road. They are now living in the John Bryant property and next spring will probably go to their farm.—Bethany Clipper.

Pickering

O. G. NULL

I. N. Wray returned the last of the week from Seward, Nebraska where he has been visiting the family of his son, Harry Wray. He reports a fair corn crop in that section of the state, which is being moved at 20 to 22 cents per bushel.

Rol Shores, a former Pickering garage owner but now living at Fort Scott, Kansas, spent last Saturday and Sunday here with his mother, Mrs. J. F. Yager. Mr. and Mrs. Yager accompanied him on his return home and will probably spend the winter in Fort Scott.

Frank Maxon has sold his 67 acre farm, three and a half miles east of town to John Morris and has moved his household effects to Pickering occupying at this time one of Walter Johnson's properties. He talks of buying property here if he can find one at suitable figures.

Joe Everhart has recently sold his 36 acre farm just north of town to Alva Ingels, the consideration being $11,000. Mr. and Mr. Ingels have moved to town and are living with Uncle Sam Lutz in his property adjoining the land they purchased of Mr. Everhart.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hogue and family who have spent the past two years in the vicinity of Idaho Falls, Idaho returned to their home near Pickering last week, and will spend the winter here on their farm west of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Green who have occupied the Hogue farm during the absence of Mr. and Mr. Hogue will move to their home in Pickering soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Lincoln are moving this week from the Coler place which they have occupied for the past year to the Clark place just east of the school house.

The initial number of "The Flashlight" a paper edited by the pupils of the Pickering School is being distributed this week at 10 cents the copy. It is a very neat little paper and shows what a bunch of youngsters can do when they undertake it. It is a booster for every department of the school, a booster for the community at large and deserves the patronage of the entire community that it may be continued through out the school term. Marian Geyer is Editor in Chief assisted by Mildred Bainum, Junior; Forest Smith, Sophomore; Donais Hood, Freshmen and John Hood, athletics.

The Rev. M. H. Eells, the newly appointed pastor of the M. E. Church has brought his household goods from Topeka, Kansas and now occupies the M. E. Parsonage. His wife will join him here next week, while his two children will remain for a time in Topeka on account of their high school courses. Rev. Eells was a member of the Missouri Conference for some years when he first entered the ministry but for the past 17 years has belonged to the Kansas Conference. His regular services here are preaching service at 11:00 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. each Sunday, prayer meeting at 7:30 P. M. on Thursday.

Regular services at the Christian Church next Sunday; Bible School at 10 A. M.; preaching 11 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. Morning theme "Profit and Loss," evening theme "Whither Goest Thou."

TO FORE IN AERO INDUSTRY

Nebraska and Iowa May Become Center of Aviation.

Western Iowa and eastern Nebraska will in all probability become the center of the aviation industry in America as a direct result of the first International Aero Congress to be held in Omaha, November 3-5, 1921.

The manufacturers of aircraft, who have been generally located in the east and on the west coast, will be shown the wonderful possibilities of the middle west in aviation. Instead of the small fields of the east, they will see the landing possibilities of the big fields of Iowa and Nebraska.

Heretofore, the cost of shipping or piloting their planes to the other parts of the country from the east, made sales difficult. Here they will see the possibilities of a one-day flight to every part of the country in disposing of their planes.

"In all probability, the congress will mean that the future of the middle west will be insuperably linked with the development of the air" said R. C. Tooke, one of the officials of the Aero Club of Omaha, "and the people of the middle west will have an opportunity to see what has been accomplished in aviation."

FREAKS OF AIR AT CONGRESS

All sorts of queer creations of the air will be on exhibit at the first International Aero Congress at Omaha, November 3-5, 1921, according to officials of the Aero Club of Omaha, who are in charge.

A. E. Bellor of Ogden, Utah, inventor of a type of dirigible with three cigar shaped bags, with motors at the sides, and a deck for passengers underneath, says his craft may be shown, according to word received by the club.

Another inventor from Montana plans to bring his plane, supposed to be the smallest made. It has a total wing spread of twelve feet, and is about the height of the inventor.

A new type of craft, capable of landing on water like a duck or on land, and which is supposed to make flying on America's waterways possible, may be shown if finished in time.

America has hundreds of inventors of air craft, some of them possible and many merely freaks. Visitors at the show will see some things that were only dreamed of a few years ago.

AIR MEET A REVELATION.

Spectacle Schduled at Omaha, November 3-5 Greatest in U. S. History.

Those who attend the International Aero Congress at Omaha, November 3-5, will see one of the biggest air spectacles ever shown in this country. Next to the famous spectacle staged by the Royal Air Force at Hendon, England, this summer, it is the greatest in the world.

A wooden model of a French village, two blocks in length, with the village church in the center, will be placed on the flying field. In the village square, scores of peasants are dancing with the Americans who have come to help defeat the Huns.

It is evening. All at once the drone of a Mercedes is heard overhead. The peasants hide in their houses, all lights are extinguished. The drone grows louder.

An American ace, who has downed a score of Huns, is in the village. He takes off in his airplane, and rises to meet the Hun. Before he can reach him, the German bombs the village, destroying part of it.

The fight in the air that follows; the reception of the American after he returns; the battle in the clouds, all go to make a wonderful spectacle that is new for this part of the world. It will be recognized by any former soldier who attends.

REUNION OF BIRDMEN.

Air Congress Will Bring Together Flyers From Many States.

The war time flyers came from the small towns and villages of America, according to army statistics. Many of them, since the war, have not had an opportunity to see an airplane. Most of them have not had the opportunity of meeting with their "buddies" of the flying camps.

The first International Aero Congress, planned for Omaha, Neb., November 3-5, will be the first reunion of the birdmen since the war, and airplanes and flyers are expected to attend from every state in the union.

From the minute they land in Omaha, the town will belong to them, according to officials of the Aero Club of Omaha, who are sponsoring the meet. Elaborate preparations for their entertainment have been made.

Many of the Legionaires who attend the national convention at Kansas City are expected to take the six hour trip to Omaha to wind up the week's festivities.

The big men of the air game are expected to attend. The Aero Club of America has promised to send six or seven speakers, who are authorities on aviation, to address public meetings of the bird men.

And there will be plenty of opportunity to play "African golf" and the other pastimes that helped to occupy the idle hours for the flyers, according to S. D. Day, chairman of the entertainment committee.

WOLF'S CLOTHING

By VERA T. ROGERS.

©, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

They were discussing the new office manager—that is, Rida and Lillian were. Kath was the listening portion of the trio. She sat in the bright sunlight streaming through the broad window, without a blink of her heavy-lidded sepia-brown eyes. Her dimpled fingers played a lazy tattoo on the typewriter before her. Once she turned her head, like a languid sunflower, toward the twittering pair, and that was all.

The new man had disappeared for a few moments. In the meantime he was "catching it" from the office.

"What do you think of him, Kath?"

"Nifty little goldie-brown mustache, eh, Kath?"

"Let Kath alone. Can't you see she's asleep—like a sweet Persian tabby in the sun?"

"A peach! An Adonois, isn't he, Kath?"

"Adenoids? You've said it!" shouted "Sour Grapes" from his high stool.

Kath spoke for the first time that day:

"Wolf's clothing!" Her tapping preserved its steady, lazy rhythm.

"That's not a wolf—it's a bear!"

"He's a bear—he's a bear," danced Rida toward the water tank.

"What did you mean by 'wolf's clothing', Kath?"

"She meant a sheep in wolf's clothing. He's a sheep—he's a sheep." warbled "Sour Grapes," saving Kath an answer.

Every high stool and swivel creaked under its weight of assiduous attention to business when Authority returned. The detail ran smoothly, for the force, in spite of spirits' overhigh, was a competent one. Sylvester Rand made vigorous use of his handkerchief when he entered. His keen gray eyes were dancing as they sought the floor. As a matter of fact he had heard every word—learned in the space of three minutes that he grew on trees, was a Greek god and was that most pitiful of objects—a sheep in wolf's clothing. He stepped to Kath's desk.

"Miss Berry, will you remain after 5 this evening. I want to discuss something." And the office listened to a man. Kath raised languid eyes, which had grown a litle wider, and nodded.

At 5:15 the company's outer office door opened and a tall, slender brunette, enveloped in furs, entered. Her deep blue eyes, in contrast to her dark hair, were alive and searching. Her glance fell upon the waiting Kath, who, dressed for the street, was seated before her covered up typewriter.

"Is Mr. Rand here?" asked the brunette sweetly.

The disgruntled one moved a languid hand toward the inner office, the door of which was slightly ajar.

Then Rand hurried out from the inner office and walked straight to Kath, without once glancing at the newcomer. "Ahem!" He drew another desk chair as close as possible to the one which held the sullen one, reached out and seized one of her chubby hands in a firm grip.

"Ahem! Now, my dear——" he began. Kath's heavy-lidded eyes, widened to their fullest and traveled past his shoulder to the other woman who was slowly rising from her seat. Then Rand also turned and looked. Releasing the hand he held he rose to his feet, turned his back to Kath and faced the tall, slender one with a copious wink. In true "movie" fashion he registered his confession and guilt.

"Ah—er—how do you do? Had no idea——"

Then he turned: "Ah—some other time, Miss Berry——" But Kath's chair was empty. On the street floor Rida and Lillian waited. They pounced upon Kath as she emerged from the elevator.

"Tell us—what did he want to see you about?"

"Girls"—the shaken one was no longer chary of speech—"take it from me that man's a wolf clear through—if his wife hadn't happened in——"

Up in the office a pair of young people had fallen into swivel chairs, weak from laughter.

"A 'peach'—an 'Adonis' is one thing, Cousin Sue; but a 'sheep' is a bird of another complexion. That girl doesn't talk much, which makes her a sort of oracle around the office. I may have to spend the rest of my life here and I'm not going to begin as a sheep—in wolf's clothing—so I staged the little affair on the spur of the moment, knowing you would be along to help me out. Tomorrow, I'll be an out-and-out wolf." The mild Sylvester threw out his chest, flung on the raccoon coat and pretended to leap savagely at his cousin . . .

They went out to dinner together. Sue and this boy-man—their cousin of hers. In the soft glow of the table lamp her eyes were very gentle, warm and maternal as she studied him. Tomorrow he would be scorned unmercifully by the employees of the company. But that was as nothing to being thought a sheep—men were like that . . . He looked up then and held her blushing gaze with masterful eyes.

"This time, Sue, you're going to accept me . . ."

Anyhow, that's how modest Sylvester, now vice-president of the company, became a wolf—in State street.

PUPILS TO COMPETE IN SAFETY CAMPAIGN

450 State Prizes Offered to Grammar School Children—Teachers Invited To Prepare Safety Lessons

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28—Seeking to reduce the number of automobile accidents, which take an annual toll of thousands of children's lives, the Highway and Highway Transport Education Committee is announcing a national safety campaign among grammar school pupils and grammar school teachers.

The campaign takes the form of two national essay contests. One is among pupils of the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades and the other is among grammar school teachers, who are being invited to prepare lessons teaching children behavior on the highways. "How I Can Make the Highways More Safe" is the subject on which children are asked to prepare essays.

Four hundred fifty state prizes are being offered through the committee by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in the hope that pupils will be stimulated to participate. The prizes have an aggregate value of $5,000 and are distributed among the states on a basis of elementary school enrollment. Teachers are offered three national prizes, the first prize of which is $500 in cash and a trip to Washington. The second and third prizes are $300 and $200 respectively.

An enthusiastic response from every section of the country has greeted the announcement. State, city and county superintendents of schools are lending the weight of their influence to the campaign and bringing the contents to the attention of pupils and teachers under their jurisdiction.

Mothers clubs, civic organizations, chambers of commerce, safety councils and other organizations that are interested in the welfare of the children of the country are assisting the committee in the national campaign which will culminate with the observance of "National Safety Week" December 4 to 10. The contests close Saturday, December 10, when all essays and lessons are to be in the hands of the principals of schools. After December 10 the best essays and the best lessons from each community will be chosen by competent committees and then forwarded to the state committee to be designated by the state superintendent of schools, or other influential persons. After the best essays and lessons have been chosen from the various states and territorial possessions, the state prizes in the pupils contests will be awarded and the manuscripts receiving state honors will then be forwarded to the committee in Washington.

Arrangements are being made for distinguished educators to read the state essays and the state lessons and chooe therefrom the ones entitled to the national honors.

Dr. John J. Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education, who is chairman of the Highway and Highway Transport Education Committee, has written the state and city superintendents requesting assistance. In his letter, Dr. Tigert said: "In order to reduce the appalling number of accidents on our streets and highways, I wish to call your attention to the safety educational program of the Highway and Highway Transport Education Committee. If not inconsistent with your policies, I trust we may have your hearty cooperation."

The committee, which has offices in the Willard Building, is answering scores of inquiries daily from principals, teachers and pupils, who have signified their intention of participating in the campaign.

Lights and Shadows

PRODUCTIVE ADVERTISING

There are three "Bewares" in the primer of every editor, reporter and aspiring newspaper worker. Where they came from we don't know and we know less of what they mean to convey. They are, "Beware of religion; beware of saying anything good about big corporations; beware of mentioning advertisers except when they pay for it." Readers of this newspaper know where it stands on religion and corporations. We are for them when they do more good than harm. We oppose them when they oppose human progress and retard human happiness.

This is about both a corporation and an advertiser—a big advertiser, the Standard Oil Company. A great change has come over the Standard Oil Company in recent years. It is no longer afraid of its own shadow. It is no longer afraid to tell who owns it, what its business methods are, what its products are and what it hopes to do. The story is being told in friendly and unfriendly papers without fear or favor, embarrassment or compunction in paid advertising space.

Of course a newspaper would naturally agree to this method of publicity. But we are not thinking of the dollars just now. We are thinking of how much further we would have progressed in the solution of many of our economic and industrial difficulties if more light had been thrown upon the inner workings of the offensives and defensives in such disputes as involve the public at large.

The series of advertisements which have been and are being published by the Standard Oil Company have become economic arguments which carry a message. We are not so pleased with them but what we realize that they put the company's best foot forward. To what extent they have sold gasoline is a matter for their advertising department to decide, but it is certain that they have sold to the public a large measure of good will which the Standard Oil Company did not possess not so very long ago.

Having committed this breach of saying something good about an advertiser, we will now shut our eyes and wait for the catastrophe that is bound to occur according to the law of primeval journalism.

When in October, 1918, the present management of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) took charge of the business, one of the first things it decided was that the public should be given intimate information regarding the Company and its affairs. Those responsible for the management knew that the policies that had animated this organization for many years were policies which benefitted stockholders, employes, and the public, and that these policies could not but meet the approval of the people generally, for they were based on fair dealing, justice and equity.

The result of this decision was the authorization of a widespread publicity campaign, which has been carried on for about three years, and the proof of its effectiveness is to be seen not only in the not infrequent mention being made by the newspapers of the country in editorals such as the one written by Mr. Johnson, quoted above, but in the better understanding on the part of the public of what the Company is trying to do.

The basic principle upon which the business of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is built is to provide the individual, wherever he may live in the 11 states served by this Company, with such products of petroleum as he may need, and to get them to him when he wants them and at a price which is fair alike to the stockholders, the public, and the competitor.

Choosing Breed of Chickens Much Like Selecting a Wife

There is no best breed of poultry. That, at least, is the opinion of men in the United States Department of Agriculture who have been studying the business for years, and have had experience with all varieties of all breeds in America. To go among your friends and ask for advice about the kind of chickens to start with would be about as productive of conflicting views as if you asked for help in buying a motor car or a typewriter. Every man has his likings, and some have good reasons for them, but in the end the beginner will have to be the judge; wherefore the opinion of the department specialists will be about the best guide: Keep only one variety of a breed, and select the breed that suits your purpose best. Be sure o' one thing—have a standardbred male at the head of the flock. Such a bird will improve the quality of the stock materially. A mongrel male will produce no improvement.

Standard Bred Fowls Are Best

These are the reasons: Standard bred fowls produce uniform products which bring higher prices.

Standardbred stock and eggs, sold for breeding purposes, bring higher prices than market quotations.

General-purpose breeds are best suited to most farms where the production of both eggs and meat is desired. The four most popular representatives of this class are the Plymouth Rock, Wyandotte, Orpington and Rhode Island Red.

All these breeds, with the exception of the Orpington, are of American origin. They are characterized by having yellow skin and legs, and lay brown-shelled eggs. The Orpington is of English origin, has a white skin, and also lays brow-shelled eggs. You can get a detailed description of all fowls of American origin in Farmers' Bulletin 806 on "Standard Varieties of Chickens. I. The American Class," which may be had upon application to the Division of Publications, United States Department of Agriculture.

The Mediterranean or egg breeds are best suited for the production of white-shelled eggs. Representatives of this class are bred largely for eggs rather than for meat. Among the popular breeds are Leghorn, Minorca, Ancona, and Andalusian.

An outstanding characteristic of the egg breeds is the fact that they are classed as nonsitters; that is, as a rule they do not become broody and hatch their eggs. When fowls of this class are kept, artificial incubation and brooding usually are employed. Farmers' Bulletin 898, "Standard Varities of Chickens. II. The Mediterranean Class," tells about this class.

Characteristics of the Meat Breeds

Langshans, Brahmas, Cochins, and Cornish fowls belong in the meat breeds, rather than for eggs, and although classed for meat are sometimes kept as general purpose fowl They are all heavier and larger than the egg breeds, or those of the general-purpose class, and lay brown shelled eggs. Farmers' Bulletin 1052, "Standard Varities of Chickens. III Aisatic, English, and French Classes" describes the breeds in this class.

Fowls for breeding purposes should be strong, healthy, vigorous birds. The comb, face, and wattles should be a bright red, eyes bright and fairly prominent, head comparatively broad, short, and not long or crow-shaped; legs set well apart and straight, plumage clean and smoth.

The beginner in poultry will be careful to have a home ready for his flock before he gets it. Farmers' Bulletin 889 contains suggestions, plans, and directions every poultry keeper should have. The Division of Publications will send it upon request. Having decided where the hens are to live, how many you are to buy, and what kind, you should next settle in your own mind another important fact: The poultry business calls for more than bulletins and houses and feed. It requires patience and kindness in a large degree, what some persons call 'mothering," which is why, the specialists declare, women and girls so often succeed where men and boys fail.

A small flock of laying hens on a town or village lot or in a city back yard is an important branch of poultry keeping. Though the value of the product from each flock is small of itself, the aggregate is large. The eggs and fowls from such a flock may be produced at a relatively low cost, because you can use table scraps and kitchen waste which otherwise would be thrown away. A small flock of hens, even so few as six or eight, should produce eggs enough, where used economically, for a family of four or five persons throughout the year, except during the molting period of the fall and early winter. By preserving surplus eggs during the spring and early summer this period of scarcity can be provided for at little expense of time, money, or labor.

Overcoming Objections

Objection is raised frequently to poultry in towns and cities because of the odor and because of the noise crowing roosters make particularly in the early morning. Where there are ordinances against poultry keeping they should be obeyed, of course, but there is no reason for having either noise or odor. If droppings boards are cleaned daily and the yards attended to, the poultry will not be objectionable; and there need be no rooster.

Unless it is intended to raise chickens the absence of the male bird will have absolutely no effect on the number of eggs laid by the hens. If it is desired to hatch chicks the male bird should be disposed of just as soon as the hatching season is over, or you may even buy fertile eggs and set them, and have no rooster on the place. Of course, the flock must be confined to your own yard, or they will stray into the neighbors' gardens and over the lawns, which certainly will cause trouble.

LETTER WARNS AGAINST AVIATION STOCK SCHEMES

Fake Promoters Will Be Busy at Legion Convention in Kansas City.

Warning against buying stock in questionable aviation enterprises is contained in a letter from the Associated Advertising Club of the World, received this morning. It is directed especially to visitors to the national convention of the American Legion at Kansas City next week. The warning is as follows:

We have received many complaints from various parts of the country that increasing efforts are being made to sell, to the general public, stocks in questionable aeronautical enterprises by means of advertising sent mainly through the mails, and by personal solicitation.

We are informed that Official Flying Meet to be held at Kansas City, October 31, November 1 and 2, in connection with the Convention of the American Legion and the International Aero Congress, which is to be held in Omaha, November 3, 4 and 5, are likely to attract to these cities, numbers of promotion salesmen or romantic adventurers who see in aviation a new field for their activities.

Organizers of fanciful or hopeless schemes are likely to collect many thousands of dollars from over-credulous investors who may be lead to risk their savings through a desire to hasten the development of a great art and industry, but usually are deceived into the expectation of large profits.

While we are unable to give figures, we believe the lack of legislation regulating the air has contributed to this deplorable situation. You can help meet the present emergency and help improve conditions in the following ways:

1—Give publicity to this warning and advise the public to investigate, through impartial sources, before investing.

2—Give your consideration to the enactment of regulatory Federal legislation and an aid to legitimate aviation. (The Wadsworth Bill, S. 2148, will establish a Bureau of Civil Aeronautics in the Department of Commerce and regulate the operation of civilian aircraft in Interstate and Foreign commerce.)

3—Bend all advertising of questionable aeronautical stock selling enterprises to the National Vigilance Committee, Associated Advertising Clubs, 110 West 40th Street, New York City, which is cooperating in this matter with the Aero Club of America and its affiliated bodies throughout the United States.

Guest at Ellison Home.

Mrs. T. E. Holland of Hot Springs, Ark., arrived in Maryville last night to visit at the home of Judge and Mrs. W. C. Ellison. Mrs. Holland will leave tomorrow morning for a visit in Kansas City, after which she expects to go to St. Louis to reside.

As a feature of the American Legion celebration to be held on November 11 in Sheridan, that county's fast basketball team has challenged any fast team in northwest Missouri for a game to be played on the Sheridan court. The main event of the athletic program will be a wrestling match between Frisco Bill Werner of Leavenworth and [illegible] of St. Joseph.

Statesmen of World Face Huge Task in Cutting Down Arms

BY T. N. SANDIFER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington Oct. 27—Statesmen and naval experts meeting to arrange for curtailing the world's navies would have had a much easier time if they had staged their conference back in John Paul Jones' day, or even in Farragut's. It wasn't so complicated then. Just look what they have to know about to-day:

Battle cruisers, battle ships, light cruisers, destroyers, submarines, airplanes, carriers, sixteen to twenty-inch guns, and nearly a million lesser details, all different.

John Paul Jones or Farragut didn't need a card index and a flotilla of yeomen clerks to keep track of the different kinds of fighting ships he had to depend on. John and the admirals of his day had only three major classes of ships.

Three Major Classes

These were: The ship of the line, which was the equivalent to our battleship of to-day; the frigate, or what would be a modern cruiser, and the sloop of war, or corvette, which was a light cruising vessel. These three classes made up the navies of the world up to Farragut's day, in the Civil war.

To further simplify matters, ships were ranked according to their guns, the guns being arranged in tiers in the ship's sides. Ships of the line carried from 74 guns to 120 and were known as "74's" or "120's" although they always carried more guns than they were credited with. As a further guide the gun tiers were marked by broad white bars around the ship lengthwise. The most ignorant lookout man in the tops could tell instantly whether a vessel "in the offing" was a formidable line ship or merely a light scout by the number of bands. To-day it takes a naval officer and perhaps a book of silhouetted shapes of vessels to identify another fighting ship on the horizon.

Guns All Simple

The guns of those days were likewise simple. Instead of the 16-inch and perhaps 20-inch monsters of to-day, arranged in hooded turrets along the deck, the guns of 100 years ago and less were mostly either the "long gun" or the "carronade." The former was used for heavy work, while carronades were for short range and had something of the effect of a large shotgun. Where to-day the gun pointer has to do most of his aiming by abstruse mathematical calculations the gunnery of the old days was remarkable for its simplicity.

Let'er Go!

The "pigtal-haired" gunner merely pointed his gun at the enemy point-blank and let fly. He moved the gun up, down, right or left, with a crowbar arrangement or ropes. The usual way of finishing a naval battle was to run alongside the enemy, grapple your ship to his and fight it out on the decks.

In those days the dignified fathers would have decreed that the navies were to limit their armament to a certain number of "longs" and "carronades," and the Angel of Peace would have been safe. To-day they don't yet know what will have to be limited or how it will be done.

On the one hand---

Mrs. Jones is "an old fashioned shopper." When she hits the buying trail, it becomes a war path. She goes everywhere, sees everything, asks countless questions, and leaves a wake of piled-up counters and worn-out sales folk behind her.

Sometimes she wonders why a tired girl is a little snippy. Often she suspects that merchandise is not shown to her with particular enthusiasm or graciousness. She wonders why somehow shopping days are becoming an ordeal that leaves her limp and worn-out at supper time.

While on the other---

Mrs. Smith is a modern shopper. She makes up her mind what she is going to look at before she leaves the house. She knows just where she is going, how much she wants to pay, and where she'll find the right goods at the right prices.

She sets out long after Mrs. Jones has left her house, and gets back in time for a cup of tea before getting supper. Everybody has a pleasant word for her, and sometimes she feels that her own face wears a perpetual smile. To her shopping is a pleasure.

NOW HERE'S THE DIFFERENCE. Mrs. Jones, being old-fashioned, doesn't realize the value—to her—of advertising. Mrs. Smith does. She makes a practice of reading the advertisements in her newspaper. Sitting at ease in her home, she formulates her shopping program and follows it out. She notes the things that interest her particularly, and plans to cut out waste motion, unnecessary steps and lost time.

Are you Mrs. Jones—or Mrs. Smith? Do you make the advertisements work for you? If not, try it. Read the advertisements carefully and regularly. You'll find the steps, the bother, the trouble they'll save you will make shopping day a holiday.

REPUBLICANS HAVE MAMMOTH DEFICIT

ADMINISTRATION TO ASK HUGE DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION

PROMISES ARE BROKEN

Budget Act Was Passed To Do Away With Such Requests—Shortage In Three Months $370,000,000

By Richard Linthicum

(Special Correspondence)

Washington, Oct. 28.—Deficiency appropriations by Congress at the end of a fiscal year are always regarded as certain, but the Harding administration, running the government machine in the back motion, and still running true to form, announces through the President's personal newspaper organ here that the Treasury Department is about to submit estimates for huge deficiency appropriations—approximately $370,000,000—with only three months of the present fiscal year passed. In other words, the present administration will begin to present deficiency bills at the beginning of the fiscal year and perhaps keep it up until the end.

The announcement is also made that "Congress as a whole is not prepared for the receipt of these disconcerting requests for additional funds, etc."

It might be added with equal truth that the taxpayers are not prepared for them either, because the taxpayers of the country were told when the budget bill was passed—in fact, they were promised—that there would be no more deficiences. Yet in the second month of the new fiscal year a deficiency bill of $48,500,000 for the Shipping Board was passed and now comes the statement that the administration faces huge deficits and must have between $300,000,000 and $400,000,000 more.

To make matters worse it is stated that the Treasury Department had these deficiencies in mind when it made up its estimates.

The Budget act was passed to meet popular objection to deficiency appropriations. Congress, realizing how obnoxious deficiency appropriations are to the taxpayers, has mde it a criminal act for a department to create a deficit without authority from the head of the department.

A budget which calls for less appropriations than are needed, with the chief fiscal officer "having in mind deficiences to follow," is really no budget at all, but savors more of a scheme to deceive the public.

The statement of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon on these projected deficiency appropriations throws a new light on President Harding's announced probable saving of $350,000,000. In substance it is that the Secretary on August 4, 1921, submitted an official estimate for the year 1922 of $4,554,000,000. He then states that the President decided to reduce this amount by $520,000,000, of which $170,000,000 would be through reduced public debt expenditures and $350,000,000 would be through reduced ordinary expenditures, thus keeping the expenditures at $4,034,000,000. Congress was therefore advised that in framing the internal revenue laws it would be safe to proceed on that basis. This $4,034,000,000, according to the announcement concerning the projected deficiency bills, includes the deficiences, but according to the announcement it is also stated that "the probable necessity for more revenue than is now generally contemplated will necessitate a final revision of the pending taxation bill by Treasury experts after it has gone to conference and before it is passed in permanent form."

The $520,000,000 reduction made in Secretary Mellon's estimate is therefore, made up of $170,000,000 Pittman Act certificates, which the government decided not to pay at this time, thereby claiming a saving of $170,000,000 and the $350,000,000 announced as a probable saving by President Harding, which represents nothing more tangible than the difference between what Secretary Mellon thought on August 4, 1921, and what he thought on August 19, 1921 after a meeting with the Committee on Ways and Means and the President.

Neither of these projected deficiency bills, nor the explanations of mythical savings, takes into account the $600,000,000 issue of short-term certificates which the Treasury recently issued in order to meet deficiency in Revenue, unless the Secretary of the Treasury intended that it should be included in his new estimate of $4,634,000,000 for the present fiscal year, and if he did so intend it to be included it is not mentioned.

What are these deficiency amounts for? According to the newspaper announcement "the largest items are those relating to vocational training and the obligations of the Government to the railroads."

The people will cheerfully bear additional taxation relating to the welfare of our soldiers and sailors in the late war, but the question naturally arises why was not an adequate amount appropriated for them in the beginning? And why were they left to depend upon deficiency appropriations which "the Treasury Department has borne in mind in preparing its financial plans for the year?"

According to the original announcement concerning these projected deficiency appropriations, followed by many attempted explanations which only tend to confuse the reader, the worst is yet to come. It says: "That still further deficiencies will arise, perhaps this year, certainly next year, it is believed by most of those students of finance at the Capitol who are trying to keep the stern facts of the case in mind without being self-deceived by those political mirages which seem to beckon so many statesmen on to delusive oasis of lower taxes and reduced expenditures on a large scale."

All of this, mind you, from a paper recognized as the official spokesman of the President and the administration.

To speak of lower taxes and reduced expenditures on a large scale as "delusive oasis," which are in fact only "political mirages" would seem to indicate a lack of faith in the President's probable saving of $350,000,000 and in the Republican promise to lower taxes and reduce expenditures.

Instead of the fulfillment of these glowing promises it would seem from the authority quoted that the Harding administration is just one deficiency bill after another.

the Hawaiian Archipelago, or Sandwich Islands—consisting of eight large islands—the property of the United States.

The three groups of the Bonin Islands known as the Parry Beechy and Coffin groups—High, rocky islets close to Japan.

The Ladrones, or Mariana Islands, just south of the Bonin groups.

The Caroline Archipelago, 170 miles south of the Ladrones.

The Marshall Islands, east of the Carolines, consisting of two parallel chains and composed of fourteen and seventeen groups, respectively.

The Gilbert Archipelago, on the Equatorial Line, containing sixteen groups of small coral island, low and barren, but densely populated.

In the South Pacific ocean islands are scattered with the greatest profusion. The northern part—that around the Australian, New Zealand and the Malay Archipelago—is occupied by the Solomon Islands, the New Hebrides the Fiji Islands. Farther to the south there are the Society Islands, including Tahiti.

The Marquesas, or Mendana Archipelago, is farther to the north again and more off the general line.

Southeast of the Society Islands and running parallel to them, is the Tuamotu (or Low) Archipelago. This group is very extensive and consists of about eighty coral islands or atolls.

The Galapagos Archipelago is situated under the equator at a distance of about six hundred miles from the west coast of South America.

In the North Pacific the Sea of Okhotsk is cut off from Behring Sea by the Peninsula of Kamschatka from the extremity of which a chain of islands extends to the borders of the Antartic Ocean. This island chain hangs in loops along the Asiatic coast each loop including an almost land locked sea. The Kurile Islands run from Kamschatka to Japan, cutting off the Sea of Okhotsk.

The great Japanese Islands with Formost to the immediate south, inclose the Sea of Japan, leaving it in communication with the Sea of Okhotosk by the Channel of Tartary and with the Pacific Ocean by means of the Straits of La Perouse and Sangar and on the south by the Straits of Korea. The Yellow Sea runs into the Chinese cost and is divided from the Sea of Japan by the Peninsula of Korea. The China Sea, with the two great gulfs of Tonquin and Siam is marked off from the Indian Ocean by the Peninsula of Malacca, the islands of Sumtra and Java, while the Phillippine Islands and Borneo separate it from the Pacific. Between the south coast of China and the northern coast of Australia the East Indian Archipelago cuts up the ocean into a network of small seas and narrow channels. The seas are named the Celebes, the Banda, the Sulu, the Java, the Flores and the Arafura.

"If this Biblical account is true, Darwinism is absolutely false as every thinking person will clearly understand. But the Evolutionist again dodges these verses, declaring them to be allegories, figures of speech or an interpolation and thereby deny the authenticity and inspiration of the Record. But again, I ask, which are you going to believe the destructive critic and infidel or the statement of Jesus who emphatically confirmed this record in Matthew, nineteenth chapter, verses three to six." The Pharisees also came unto him, tempting him, and saying unto him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause? And he answered and said unto them, Have ye not read that he which made them at the beginning made them male and female. And he said, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh?"

Not an Allegory

"In this record he does not even say it is a figure of speech, or an allegory but states it as an historical fact and even quotes from this second chapter of Genesis, thus putting his stamp of approval upon the whole record. Now the Evolutionist must believe one of two things, either Jesus did not know or he falsified, thus deceiving His audience. Where is the so-called Christian man to day who is willing to accept either of these conclusions? In either case, if He was ignorant or falsified, He could not be the Son of God and the Savior of Man. The logical conclusion is then that the Evolutionist must deny the Sonship of Jesus and His power to save. And it is a fact that this is exactly what they do and when pushed to they will deny the Virgin Birth of our Lord and His Immaculate Conception. If Jesus was not conceived of the Holy Ghost and born of the Virgin as the Biblical Record states, he was an illegitimate child and again could not be the Son of God. The Evolutionist says he was merely the son of Joseph and are forced to this position because they cannot account for Him upon any other ground in denying the Biblical Record. But the Bible says Joseph and Mary were not married at the time of the conception of Christ, thus again their theory makes Him an illegitimate child.

"These statements are absolutely the necessary conclusions of the Darwinian Evolutionist and if you have anybody in these parts who dares to deny it, trot him out and I will force him to a public denial of the Biblical account of Creation and the Virgin Birth of Jesus.

Fails on Four Points

There are four points upon which Evolution absolutely fails.

1. They cannot account for the origin of matter.

2. They cannot account for the origin of force.

3. They cannot account for the formation and orderly arrangement of the Universe.

4. They cannot account for the origin of Life.

"As a writer upon this subject has well stated 'In all of these it fails. It confesses its failure in the first two and last and makes ludicrous attempts to explain the third.

"This whole theory is destructive of Christian faith. It has destroyed the faith of thousands and driven them out into Unitarianism and also infidelity. This I know to be a positive fact from my own observation. It demagnetizes the preacher who holds to the theory. There is not a single soul winner in the whole group of Ministers who dares to preach this thing from the pulpit and there is no force in his message for it is the Gospel of Christ that has the power to save. Romans 1:16. And nothing short of that will win men and hold them to the Kingdom of God.

"It drives men out of the Ministry. Many brilliant men who otherwise would have useful and powerful in the saving of souls have been driven out of the ministry because they have accepted the theory, and their usefulness in the Kingdom of God is gone.

Will Divide Church

"I represent a church, thank God, which stands for the inspiration of the Bible, the divinity of Christ and the power of the Gospel to save from sin. I feel sorry for any church that has put up with this tommyrot. No minister has the right to eat the bread and butter of a people whose doctrine he does not believe. The great evangelist bodies as such, believe in the great fundamentals of Faith and any minister who does not preach them and stand by them is not true to his people. It will divide the church, rend asunder its own people and cause inestimable harm to the Kingdom of God in the community where he dishes out this infidel poison."

Mrs. F. P. Robinson and Mrs. Sarah Wright sang most effectively last night the old song, "Precious Name." Mr. E. C. Cassity, an evangelistic singer, who is visiting the Pastor, h. E. Snodgrass will sing at the services tonight.

There were three more added at the services last night, making a total of one hundred and twenty six. There were nine additions at Barnard last night and one at Skidmore. The Skidmore meeting closed with a total of forty-nine. Hopkins closed with forty-six. Nine of them came the last night of invitation.

They had worked the ball to within nine yards of the Tarkio goal line in this same quarter when the period ended. Thrailkill went across the Tarkio goal line another time, but King City was penalized and the score was not allowed. Thrailkill and Christie, fullback, starred for King City.

Ed Glenn, Maryville State Teachers College, refereed. King City has won one game, lost two and tied one this season.
